

PART A: RESPONDING TO THE TEXT (5 points)

SAMPLE I	There are many advantages of brain drain on the host, because which use people to economic growth. Also, Brain drain is benefit for sending countries. If developing countries provide job opportunities returners, they will very useful. RATER'S GRADE : 2/5
SAMPLE II	The 'brain drain' has advantages for the host country in many aspects. The foreign skilled workers contribute to the host country's economic growth and achievements in research, innovation and entrepreneurship. For the sending countries, the 'brain drain' can have advantages if their skilled workers return to their countries with the opportunities to use the new technologies and valuable experiences, learnt in the host countries. Moreover, those returners can provide capital to the sending countries if they are attracted back home. RATER'S GRADE: 5/5
SAMPLE III	"Brain drain" may serve some benefits for both the host and sending countries. The host countries get benefit of the skilled workers especially on information technologies which the US is a big example of. When a country has the clever brains all over the world, it has a great benefit over them. Also, if these people return to their countries, with experiences they get in the host country, the sending country gets maybe more benefits that the host. The important things to be able to make them return. RATER'S GRADE: 3/5

PART B: PARAGRAPH WRITING (15 points)

SAMPLE I

There are three main things that Azerbaijani government can do in order to control brain-drain; affording the education, wanting a compulsory work after turning back and providing a high quality of work and daily life. Firstly, the government can afford the education of the satisfied students in order to help them improve themselves, and learn how to combine the new technology and skills of the host country, generally the developed country, to our own. This will help us to improve our technology. Secondly, the government should make the skilled emigrants turn back, so a compulsory working of three or four years is necessary in order to benefit from their skills. Lastly, the government has to provide high technology for them to help them show their skills. This can not be enough to avoid them to turn back to the host country or another developed foreign country; therefore the government should pay them a high salary and provide a high quality of life to make them work comfortably and to encourage them work in their own country. In conclusion, by providing qualified working conditions and a high qualified life, it will be easy to make skilled emigrants who studied or worked in a developed foreign country to improve their skills, turn back to their own country.

RATER'S GRADE: 11/15

SAMPLE II

Nowadays, living in foreign countries is a dream of most of young people in Azerbaijan. It is to had to beat this idea. Governments, like Azerbaijani government want reduce brain drain, have some choices. Firstly government should make some improvements to keep brain drain under control. Moreover, Research and Development centers, like technopolises should be made. For example, US haven't had Silicon Valley for three or four decades. Secondly, bills payed to skilled workers should make them be satisfied. The more the bills, the happier possible emigrants from our country. Thirdly, government should guarantee health of people. Furthermore, workers without doubt about their health are more productive.

In conclusion, to keep brain drain under control is not a easy think. It requires some investments and prequisities such health system. However, a government like ours can achieve this gool.

RATER'S GRADE: 4/15

SAMPLE III

Brain drain which can be described as people with good quality leave their country to work in another country for better conditions is crucial problem for Azerbaijan and its future. In the educational and technological area, Azerbaijan needs highly skilled people but the government can't be said to do anything to give those people better conditions. Although there are so valuable brains in Azerbaijan, they can't do anything because of government's lack of payment. Because of this reason, the government has to pay more money to universities and people who deal with science, and encourage them for their next searches. The government can send the scientists to abroad for their issues, for their searches so that he can have more information and experience about the issue which they work on. Also the government must bring new technologies from highly developed countries for their scientist. The new technologies consist new machines and new instruments. If the government does not provide better conditions for its scientists for its people, it will lose the brains and those people will look for other alternatives in other countries.

RATER'S GRADE: 9/15

SAMPLE IV

Basically, there are two options for Azerbaijani government to control brain drain. The first, which is more democratic but expensive, is to make the conditions better in Azerbaijani professional and academic environment. If we analyze the reasons of not returning back to Azerbaijan, we can see that the main cause is the thought that there is no potential in Azerbaijan for the highly skilled person to utilize the acquired experience and knowledge. In order to prevent this situation Azerbaijan can do a couple of things. First it has to change the legislation system to facilitate establishing a business. Moreover, the incentives will help people realize their ideas. In relation to this, in order to nurture the professional environment with new projects, Azerbaijani government has to create a collaboration environment where the academic staff help the professionals grow their business and the latter help the academics do the desired research. Although it is not so democratic, as the first option, the second one can also be effective. The main idea is to enforce these people to return home or help people in Azerbaijan. It will be achieved by a contract saying Azerbaijani government will help these people during their student lives, but in return they will come home, or make economic aids to Azerbaijan or help the Azerbaijani businessmen with knowhow and professional network.

RATER'S GRADE: 14/15

SAMPLE V

The biggest problem of Azerbaijani government about educated people is the "brain drain". Large number of educated and high skilled people live their own country to live in better conditions and to get bigger salaries. These educated people leaves their own country and most of them never come back to Azerbaijan. This is really a big problem for Azerbaijani government. To keep the brain drain from Azerbaijan, Azerbaijani government must change the education system. Because there are a lot of universities and a lot of departments. From this reason there are a lot of people graduated from universities. But Azerbaijan doesn't need all of these graduated people. Since there are a lot of graduated people most of them can't find good jobs and the salaries rices down. So educated people go to the another country . When they use to live in that country they do not come back to Azerbaijan. If the education system changes and if the educated people become valuable then they never go another country. When people go another country they can improve itself but most of them never come back so it is bad for Azerbaijani government. Finally, to keep the brain drain of Azerbaijan, Azerbaijani government must change the education system. If doesn't change in the next few years there won't be ant educated people in Azerbaijan.

RATER'S GRADE: 7/15